GENERAL REGULATIONS.

1. Whenever any householder knows or suspects that any person within his household has small-pox, he shall immediately, by special messenger when possible, give notice to the Medical Health Officer.

3. Any physician so called shall have, for the purpose of isolating the infected person and his attendants, and of placing the patient, attendants, and all other persons residing in the same house and the house itself in quarantine, all the powers of the Medical Health Officer, and the duty of ordering and enforcing such immediate isolation and quarantine shall devolve upon such physician until the Medical Health Officer has been notified and has had time to act.

4. Whenever a teacher in any school has reason to suspect that any pupil is suffering from small-pox, or that small-pox exists at the house of any pupil, he shall notify the Medical Health Officer immediately, and shall prevent the attendance of said pupil or pupils until medical evidence that no danger of infection exists has been obtained. (Vide section 86, subsection (3), "Health Act, 1893.")

5. Physicians, teachers, and householders shall notify the Medical Health Officer of the presence, or suspected presence, of chicken-pox.

6. The Medical Health Officer shall immediately give notice by telegraph to the Provincial Board of Health of the first case of small-pox which shall appear in his district, and shall further furnish every seven days, or oftener if required, a statement showing the number of new cases developed, the number of those who have died, the number of those who have recovered, and the number who are still sick.

Suspected Case.

7. The Medical Health Officer of every district, or any of his medical assistants, having received information of a suspected case of small-pox, shall immediately inquire into the facts, either by consultation with the attending physician or by his own personal observation, or both. If the characteristic symptoms are not sufficiently developed at the time of investigation, the Medical Health Officer shall keep the case under his own personal observation at the special suspect station or elsewhere until the true nature of the disease is discovered. Until the time has arrived when, in the opinion of the Medical Health Officer, all cause for suspicion or danger is past, the suspected case shall be isolated and otherwise dealt with in the same manner as prescribed for a case of small-pox. The persons living in the same house, or who have been in contact with the infected patient shall also be kept under observation. And all such persons and the suspected person also shall be immediately vaccinated with the most active vaccine matter procurable.

Actual Cases.

Every resident of this Province shall forthwith be vaccinated or produce to the Medical Health Officer of the district or municipality where he or she resides a certificate or proof of successful vaccination within the preceding seven years, or a certificate that such person is at the present insusceptible of vaccination, or a certificate of physical unfitness for vaccination. Such certificate shall be from a duly qualified medical practitioner.

11. It shall be the duty of the School Trustees and teachers of all schools (public or private) to see that the provisions of the preceding subsection are forthwith complied with by all children attending such schools, high schools, or colleges.

PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH. BRITISH COLUMBIA.

To Medical Health Officers and others in charge of the Management of Outbreaks of Small-pox:

Upon discovery of the existence of small-pox, or of persons who have been exposed to small-pox, act quickly. Investigate at once all rumours or reports of infection.

The powers given by the "Health Act" are ample in almost any contingency.

The duty of the Local Board is to act promptly. No time should be wasted in an endeavour to obtain the consent or approval of the municipal officers, or of anyone else. Your municipality, or whoever may be responsible, will be obliged to pay all reasonable charges, and the more promptly you act the smaller the bills will be.

If any person breaks quarantine, violates the provisions of the health laws, or interferes with the work of the duly appointed officers, have him arrested at once. If infectious, he should be held until he can be disinfected and brought before a magistrate.

SUSPECTS, OR EXPOSED PERSONS.

Trace out, as speedily as possible, every person who has been exposed to the infection of small-pox. Make a note of the date of exposure. When located, vaccinate every such person as soon as possible. Vaccinate, also, all the members of his family, and of the household in which he lives.

As to the question of quarantining a person who has been exposed to small-pox:

If he is a transient, and has not a certificate of recent successful vaccination, keep him under close quarantine.

If, on the other hand, he is a permanent resident and trustworthy, and has not had an intimate association with an infected case, vaccinate him, disinfect his person and clothing, and keep him under observation.

If, again, any transient can prove to the medical man in charge that he has been successfully vaccinated within the past two years, and can show that such vaccination was successfully effected in not less than three points (three scars), such person, if considered trustworthy, may be disinfected and allowed to proceed, on condition—

(1.) That he states where he is to reside during the next sixteen days:

(2.) That he undertakes to consult a doctor, and gives his full history of exposure to small-pox, on the very first indication of illness.

Persons who have been exposed to small-pox should be considered under two classes:—

(1.) Those who have been exposed but once to the infection, and are immediately vaccinated. These should be kept under observation until there are unmistakable evidences of the success of the vaccination, when they can be discharged from further surveillance:

(2.) Persons who have been exposed to small-pox, and several days (over four) have elapsed before vaccination. These should be kept under observation for sixteen days from their last possible exposure. The wearing of their own possibly-infected clothing should be deemed a continuation of exposure.

VACCINATION.

In the vaccination of persons who have been exposed to small-pox "time is money." The failure to effect prompt vaccination sometimes costs individuals and municipalities much money.

Prompt vaccination is required for the exposed person, so that, the vaccination may get ahead of the small-pox and modify it or prevent it entirely, and for the persons housed or associated with him the aim should be the speediest possible "takes," so that these persons may be fully protected if the person already exposed develops small-pox.

If, after reasoning with them, suspects refuse to be vaccinated, apply an absolute quarantine just as long as may be necessary.

QUARANTINE.

The Quarantine.—The quarantine of every small-pox patient should be prompt and absolute. A guard should be placed over every infected house day and night, and special visits should be made at unexpected hours to see whether the guards are doing their duty.

Nurses.—When it is known that persons have been exposed to small-pox, officers should promptly arrange for the worst. Facilities for quarantine and treatment should be considered. Nurses and medical attendants should be arranged for, and, if possible, conditionally engaged. For nurses, have persons who have had small-pox, or who are thoroughly protected by recent successful vaccination (three or four scars).

HOSPITALS AND CAMPS.

When small-pox breaks out the question will often arise whether the sick shall be kept and cared for in their own houses or removed to other quarters. When at all practicable to do so, their removal should be ordered, and the house from which they are taken should be disinfected without delay.

When a house is not available as a hospital, a temporary camp or shed may quickly be built. During the summer months a tent, or a number of tents will answer the purpose.

Persons who have been exposed to small-pox, and persons who show uncertain symptoms, should not be confined with small-pox patients.

Disinfection.—The disinfection of infected houses or rooms should be left to experts, or else done under the direct supervision of a doctor.

Formaldehyde is the surest and least objectionable disinfectant. Compared with sulphur it is not poisonous, it does not escape from rooms so rapidly, it does not injure articles of furniture, etc., and it has greater power of penetration. The more tightly the rooms are made to prevent the escape of the gas, the more penetrating will be the power of the formaldehyde.

BRIEF POINTS FOR NON-MEDICAL MEMBERS OF LOCAL BOARDS.

The period of incubation of small-pox, namely, time from entry of disease into the system to the first symptom, is twelve to sixteen days. It may be longer or shorter. In from about forty-eight to sixty hours more the eruption begins to show as small red specks and then as pimples or papules, at first on the forehead and wrists, gradually extending over the body so that the eruption becomes general in about twenty-four hours. From the second to the fifth days of disease (counting from the first symptoms) the eruption is papular, and the characteristic "shotty" sensation is obtained by passing the fingers over the skin. During the next twenty-four hours the papules become vesicles. Vesicles are watery blisters containing clear fluid on their summits. The next change is that the vesicles become pustules by becoming yellow, they now contain pus or "matter." The pustules often present a slight depression in the centre, that is, they are "umbilicated." The fever having declined when this eruption first appeared, now rises again. Severe pain in the small of the back is somewhat characteristic of small-pox.

In modified small-pox, or in mild epidemics, the eruption aborts at various stages or passes rapidly to the pustular stage and very mild constitutional symptoms are present.

Small-pox is intensely infectious at all periods of the disease, but less so at the early stages than when the scabs are peeling.

The United States Marine Hospital Service have issued the following maxims which you would do well to bear in mind:—

"Small-pox cannot be suppressed without the expenditure of money."

"The more promptly you act the less it will cost."

"When in doubt act on the safe side."

And, finally, isolate, vaccinate, disinfect.

When small-pox is present in the Province, any physician who is called upon to visit a person suffering from chicken-pox shall immediately give written notice to the Medical Health Officer.
